THE GREATEST LAW

Jesus simplifies all the laws and precepts of the Old Testament in one simple law: The Love of God, self and neighbor. In the first reading of Exodus, God himself is taking the responsibility to defend the migrants, the orphans and the widows. Whenever a poor or a marginalized person will pray to God, He “will listen, for He is compassionate”.

The Love of God is the key to a good life. Our relationships with God, self and neighbor are based totally on love and compassion. The law without love becomes vengeance; the law without love becomes selfishness and greed; the law without love becomes self-centered isolation. The law without love is not human, but mechanical.

As human beings we are created to be social, that is, in relationship with others. Any good relationship is made of love and compassion. Love is the glue of marriage; love is the respect of life; love is the hope for the future.

And love is not a choice, it is a “command”. We cannot live without love; we cannot build any relationship with God or neighbor without love. Law is not sufficient.

Love also fulfills the law; life without love is not livable; life without love is useless for God and for man.

But real love has to be discovered and built slowly, during all the extent of life. Every season has its particular love; every age builds a different type of love; we never stop on building a life of love. Love never ends, says St. Paul in the letter to the Corinthians (Ch. 13). God is love; and God created all things out of love. Do we really know how to love in the right way, the way of God?
