Is the end near?

Today's media offer us, in an instant, images from all over the world and at the moment when the events are happening. In the same newscast, we can see images of natural disasters, clashes of demonstrators with the police, tensions and political crises in other countries, the almost chronic and terrible hunger in other parts of the world, and so on. In short, a lot of news that fill our TV screen with bad news, natural and human disasters that we do not know how we will be able to face. Is the end near? Will our world be able to bear the consequences of pollution and climate change that we ourselves have caused? Will our human society be able to be more just and promote the rights of all, men and women, without exception?

We must admit that we are often in doubt. We have the feeling that the end is near and we are afraid. Many of us have our little corner of peace. Moreover, we are afraid of losing it.

Today Jesus tells us not to be terrified. Jesus says that many things are certainly going to happen, and bad things: wars, insurrections, earthquakes, famines and plagues. Even extraordinary signs in heaven. With all that, we must remain calm. What is more: we believers will be handed over to authority. We will be treated as criminals. However, all that will be nothing more than an opportunity to bear witness to our faith.

Therefore, the message of this Sunday is clear: tranquility and confidence. As St. Paul tells us in the second reading, it is time to work normally, to live a decent life minding our own business and not worrying either about ourselves or others. It is time to give witness to our Christian faith, a faith that knows how to build the community, the family of all the sons and daughters of God in the midst of all those things that happen in our world. We cannot be filled with fear, we cannot live stressed thinking about what will happen in the future and forget to live in the present.

For our reflection: What do we think when we watch television news and hear so much sad news? How do we give witness to our faith here and now? Do we communicate serenity, peace and faith to those around us? What do we do to help build the Kingdom, the family of God with those around us?
