MASS INTENTIONS

Jesus the King? are you sure?

The Gospel reading that the Church proposes for this day leaves us a bit confused. It is the last Sunday of the year and the liturgy dedicates it to Christ the King. The Church wants us to see Jesus in triumph, as the one in whom all things come to fullness. With him, the Kingdom of God will cease to be a dream and become a full reality. But how is it possible that the Gospel presents Jesus on the cross?

We have the impression that the kingdom of Jesus is not exactly the same as the governments and kingdoms of this world. Jesus is a man who, even while dying on the cross, still arouses opposing passions. Some laugh at him and others affirm his innocence. Even more, at the moment of the cross, Jesus himself is able to promise paradise to the man who is crucified next to him.

His kingdom is not of this world. His kingdom is the reign of God who gathers together and gathers all his scattered sons and daughters to make them into one family. In God's kingdom we are not subjects. Nor are we citizens. We are children. Absolutely different.

From this perspective we understand better the fullness referred to in the reading of the letter to the Colossians. When the superiority of Jesus over all things and over all persons is affirmed there, when we are told that in Jesus the Kingdom of God will reach its fullness, it does not mean that in his time this kingdom will be economically prosperous. Nor does it mean that grandiose works and monuments will be built to perpetuate his memory. It is rather a kingdom where we are all brothers and sisters and God, the center and origin of everything, is our father, the fullness will be seen when fraternity, solidarity and justice among all will be truly realized. A kingdom without borders, without divisions based on race, culture, religion or nationality, because all humanity, together with all creation, is called to participate in that fullness. Jesus is the king of that kingdom. Precisely for this reason he died on the cross; for this reason, God, the Father who loves life, raised him up and today we keep alive the hope of the coming of his Kingdom.

For our own reflection

Are we willing to serve our fellow men and women? Do we strive for fraternity, solidarity and justice among ourselves? Do we maintain hope in spite of the difficulties we encounter on life's journey?
