The Love of God

No one is dispensable before God. It has become a boring refrain but each of us was created in the image and likeness of God. God gave us more than most creatures. We were given freedom, will, and soul. While other creatures have value, their life ends here. The human being, no matter how ugly to some, so poor compared to others, and even so evil, is still regarded by God as His children. This may be hard to understand and accept. But remember, God's ways are not our ways. Besides, who knows, one day, we might just find ourselves on that end. And we will be thankful that God cares for all.

God is the best in terms of seeing our hearts, soul, mind, and person. While the world relies mostly on externals, achievements, and what are fascinating, our God loves us as we are. Included in that love, He is always giving the opportunity to change and be better. God is more concerned with what will fulfil us. And that is not about riches, fame, or power. It is about salvation. This alone makes us very important before God.

But it should not only be God who must give importance to ourselves. We too must render that regard for ourselves, and to others too. It is part of being saved to respond to God's love by loving ourselves and loving others. Thus, if we are joyful in being treated in the best way, we render the same to others.
